

Young Wife Took Poison Accidentally Coroner Jury Verdict

Mrs. Carrie Hurley, aged 35 years, was found lying on a bed in a dying condition in her home in Mokena by her husband, Gilbert Hurley about 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning following a quarrel and fist fight between Hurley and his brother-in-law Walter Cappel, also of Mokena.

Mr. Hurley ran over to the home of his neighbor, Fred Hentsch. He asked that his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Cappel be notified at once and that a doctor be summoned.

In a few minutes Dr. E. G. MacMahon of Mokena arrived, but Mrs. Hurley was breathing her last as the doctor came in the room.

The coroner's office at Joliet was notified and Deputy Coroner Willard Blood came out. A search revealed a bottle of Cresolene, a deadly poison used in Cresolene lamps for whooping cough, in a bureau drawer. A portion of the contents of the bottle had been taken and Dr. MacMahon found acid burns on the mouth of Mrs. Hurley.

At the inquest held Monday morning at 11 o'clock in the Hurley home in Mokena by Coroner E. A. Kingston of Will County, the following testimony was taken under oath, leading up to the tragic death of the young wife and mother.

The first witness called by the coroner, was the husband, Gilbert Hurley.

He testified of domestic troubles that arose Friday afternoon and of patching them up the same evening. Saturday morning he said things were peaceful and that he went to his mother's home and when he returned home towards noon his wife was preparing dinner. He then spoke of the quarrel which arose between himself and his brother-in-law, when the latter called shortly after eleven o'clock and of the ensuing fight. Mrs. Hurley begged them to stop fighting and seized her brother's arms to stop him. Both quit fighting and stepped out doors. When Mr. Hurley came back into the house, he missed his wife and after a brief search found her lying on a bed in an upstairs bedroom in a dying condition. He ran over to his neighbor, Fred Hentsch and asked him to call a doctor right away and to notify his wife's parents.

When Dr. MacMahon was asked to testify he told of finding acid burns on the mouth of Mrs. Hurley. A bottle of Cresolene which was found in a bureau drawer in the same bedroom where Mrs. Hurley was found, was exhibited by the coroner who inquired of the physician regarding the fluid and he said it is a deadly poison.

The next witness called was Mrs. Hurley's brother, Walter Cappel. He testified that he had been in the habit of bringing milk to his sister's home each morning and that when he called Saturday morning his sister had tears in her eyes and told him of domestic troubles that had come up between her husband and herself Friday afternoon. She warned her brother that Hurley had told her he was going to "clean-up" on her father and her brother before he went to work Sunday morning. Mr. Cappel told of the quarrel and fist fight between Hurley and himself and told of his sister pleading with both of them to stop. He said his brother-in-law ordered him out of the house and as he went out he saw his sister standing at the kitchen door, crying as though her heart would break. Mr. Cappel said he went home and soon after received a telephone message from Mr. Fred Hentsch that his parents should come at once to his sister's home. A few seconds later another call came that his sister was dead.

SLAYER OF MOKENA MAN GOES ON TRIAL

The trial of Fredrick Gauger of Chicago who has been held for murder in the Kankakee County jail since the killing of Emil Mau of Mokena on November 27th, 1932 in a road house brawl in Kankakee County, is going on this week in the Circuit Court of Kankakee County.

Taking of testimony was begun Wednesday morning.

Mau, 34 years old, was shot and killed while attempting to intervene in a fight between Gauger and Harry Mall, the latter being the manager of the Mokena yard of the Frank Mall Lumber Co., and former Mayor of Mokena, who was at the road house.

Mall, Mau and John Martie, all of Mokena, had been on a rabbit hunting trip. They stopped at the roadhouse operated by Charles Rouse in Kankakee County, to dine. There Mall, according to witnesses became involved in an argument with Gauger. Some of the men, witnesses said, had been drinking.

Mau intervened and finally went outside with Gauger. Gauger is alleged to have run to his automobile, snatched a shotgun and shot Mau in the head, killing him instantly.

Gauger's attorney in court said they would offer a plea of self defense for their client. They claim Gauger an invalid suffering from tuberculosis, was attacked and beaten by Mau and two of the Mokena man's companions. Gauger fired to protect himself his attorneys said.

State's attorney V. A. Parish and his assistant J. F. Arnold did not qualify four jurors accepted Monday for the death penalty which was taken to mean they will ask for a prison sentence.

Martie and Mall were called to the stand by the state Tuesday and related the same story as they did at the inquest, blaming Gauger for instigating the battle which led to the fatal shooting. Mall admitted that he and his companions had some wine before they arrived at the roadhouse, and said they had "four or five" drinks while there but denied they were intoxicated.

Sheriff Albert Goodknecht of Kankakee County who arrested Gauger after the shooting and Mrs. Nellie Riemers, waitress at the roadhouse, also were called to the stand by the state.

Tinley Man Is Overcome By Cold

During the blizzard Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Eldred residing in the Elmore subdivision north of Tinley Park was overcome by the cold. His auto became stalled in a snow drift on Oak Park avenue north of Tinley. After hard work he got out of the drift but suffered from exposure. He felt sick and sleepy and managed to get to the English Brothers garage. He was put to bed in the English home and Dr. R. H. Carmichael was summoned. After several hours he was able to return home and was able to be out Wednesday.

Caterpillar Tractor Opens Tinley Streets

The Tinley Park village board opened the village streets Wednesday morning by using a caterpillar tractor attached to a road scraper. The deep snow drifts were broken thru and the village streets were open for traffic by noon.

Blizzard Closes Rural Schools and Highways

The rural sections and villages are just beginning to pull themselves out of the heaviest snowfall experienced in many years. When the blizzard swept the country Tuesday the entire country became snow bound. Suburban trains, however, kept up their regular schedules. Thru trains were from 3 to 5 hours late. A force of men worked all night at Mokena keeping the switches cleaned on the Rock Island railroad.

Milk trucks which haul milk from the farms to Chicago, became stalled and some milk was finally brought to Mokena and shipped by train to Chicago.

Mail carriers have only been able to make part of their routes as deep snow drifts still block some of the roads.

Traffic on the paved roads was halted and ceased entirely by Tuesday night. County and state plows were kept busy breaking a way, but the heavy gale accompanying the snow blew the roads closed soon as the plows made an opening. Autos and trucks were stalled in drifts on the Lincoln Highway all the way from Joliet to Chicago Heights. The same conditions prevailed on the rest of the paved highways in this section.

The big milk truck of Clarence Bettenhausen became stuck in a drift at Coopers Grove and was released by the county snow plow. Most of the paved highways have only one way lanes opened thru the deep snow banks.

Highway Commissioner Emil D. Cappel had the Frankfort township snow plow in operation all day Tuesday and that night the plow got stuck in a drift and work was stopped until Wednesday morning. The men remained overnight at Mr. Cappel's home. Many of the side roads in the country districts are buried so deep under the snow that it will be weeks before they can be used again. People living along these roads have to detour thru the fields to the main highways.

The schools have been hard hit by the frigid weather and snow. At Tinley Park the public school opened Tuesday morning but when only 20 pupils out of the entire enrollment were able to get to the school, it was closed at noon. At Mokena the public school did not open at all. Wednesday morning only a few pupils appeared so the school remained closed for the day. Thursday morning it was decided not to open the school on account of the severe cold. Mrs. Ferguson, teacher of the intermediate room is ill in her home in Joliet. At Frankfort and Orland the schools remained open. Thermometers registered all the way from 8 to 15 degrees below zero Thursday morning.

The Mokena village board meeting which was to have been held on Tuesday night had to be postponed until Wednesday night on account of the impassable streets and sidewalks.

All fire hydrants in the villages in this section were dug out of the snow first so as not to delay the fire departments should there be a fire.

At Mokena a fire broke out in the Mokena Oil Company plant about 10 a. m. Thursday morning. A detailed account of this fire will be found in another column.

Meat, fruit and bakery trucks were unable to make their rounds to the rural sections for a few days. Some of the merchants had their supplies shipped in by train.

Very few cars are on the highways now and the old time horses and bobsleds are in use instead. The coal dealers are doing a rushing business. Coal is being hauled away in sleds, wagons, in bags and baskets.

Licenses In Mokena To Be Paid March 1

The Mokena village board at their session Wednesday night had the matter of collecting licenses up for chief discussion. Dog and vehicle license notices have been issued by the village clerk. All these licenses must be paid by March 1st. Out of 146 vehicle licenses in the village 25 have been paid and out of 54 dog licenses 2 have been paid. The vehicle licenses have been reduced from $5 to 3 per year.

Property Owners Should Keep All Fire Plugs Clear

All property owners in villages having fire protection should see to it that all fire plugs near their premises are kept free from snow so that in the event of fire these fire plugs are readily accessible.

Fire Destroys Mokena Oil Company Office

Fire of unknown origin broke out in the office of the Mokena Oil Co., Thursday morning. Quick work on the part of the Mokena fire department prevented the flames from reaching an adjoining store room in which a large quantity of oil and alcohol is stored. The flames gutted the office but the rest of the building was saved.

Soon as the fire siren sounded the newly organized Mokena Volunteer Fire Department responded with the hose cart. The fire hose was attached to the fire plug in front of the old school in the east side of the village and strung over the Rock Island railroad tracks to the Oil Company plant. A freight train was stopped until the fire was out and the hose could be removed from the track. The firemen were aided by many of the residents in fighting the fire.

There was no one at the plant when the fire broke out. The fire was discovered by alderman Julius Oswald who turned in the fire alarm.

Both of the oil trucks had gone out so the entire damage was confined to the office. All the books and records of the company were in a fire proof safe and they were saved.

The damage it is estimated will be over $1,000. Fire Chief Herman Schweser was in charge of the fire fighters. A number of the men were showered with water and a number suffered frost bitten ears. Among those whose ears were frozen were Harry Mall, Fire Chief Herman Schweser and Philip Hacker, Jr.

E. V. Maltby, One Time Mokena Farmer Sent To Prison

Ernest V. Maltby, reputed to be a millionaire at one time and who owned and resided on farm north of Mokena a number of years ago, was found guilty of embezzling $2,000 from a farmers co-operative grain trading organization of which he was general manager, in the court of Judge Rudolph Desort in Chicago on Wednesday and was sentenced by the judge to one to ten years at Joliet.

Maltby, who is now sixty years old broke down and wept in court when sentence was passed. His attorneys announced an appeal to the State Supreme Court, after a motion for a new trial was denied.

The corporation is now in equity receivership with a deficit of $170,000, and the prosecutors stated that Maltby's defalcations would total about that amount. He was tried on only the $2,000 transaction, but four other indictments are pending against him.

As vice-president and general manager of the Rural Grain Co., he received a salary of $7,500 a year. Maltby at one time also owned a farm near Midlothian.

Wholesale Arrests Made In Tinley In Union Squabble

The Tinley Park jail was filled to capacity the latter part of last week when men from the Cook County State's Attorney's office ordered the detention of the officers of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union, the Pure Milk Association and two former truck drivers of Irving Bettenhausen.

Chief of Police Harry Utte of Tinley Park was ordered by States attorney Courtney's men to arrest among others, Clarence Glowry, business agent of the union, Jeff Johnson another business agent, Dickson & Clett of the Pure Milk Association.

Many farmers of the vicinity among whom were L. Woodman, J. Scott, J. Hunter, W. Siebrandt, H. Wannemacher, Johnson, H. Schmaedeke, Pete Nieman, Chas. Mancke, A. Strassenberg and John Hotchkiss complained according to reports that milk was being picked up by the Glowry Motor Service, said to be owned by the brother of the above mentioned business agent, while the farmers had requested the Bettenhausen trucks to pick up the milk.

The parties taken in custody were taken from Tinley Park to the county jail in Chicago and questioned and held until 2:30 p. m., that afternoon.

Mr. Bettenhausen advised that this legal action was brought about thru the efforts of a relative of the business agent of the union, who hired the men whom he had released a few days previously and they all tried to squeeze him out of the milk market. Mr. Bettenhausen claims. Mr. Bettenhausen says he and his men are all members of the union.

A meeting had been scheduled with the union officials for Tuesday but due to the impassable roads and stormy weather the meeting has been postponed to a later date.

During the blizzard on Tuesday afternoon a big greyhound bus running from St. Louis to Chicago, stalled in a snow drift on 159th street and Keane avenue. Some of the passengers managed to get to Orland Park and took a Wabash suburban train from there to Chicago. The county snow plow finally got the bus out of the drift and it proceeded to Chicago.

Finger Prints May Clear 8 Year Old Murder Mystery

Eight years of mystery for Will County authorities in their efforts to apprehend the man suspected of killing a Green Garden constable in 1924 apparently have been ended the past week when the Washington bureau of identification wired that the suspect is in custody of the police at Toledo, Ohio.

Arrangements were being made by William R. McCabe, Will County state's attorney to return the man to Joliet for prosecution if it is found that he is the man wanted here. The man is believed to be Raymond Miller, alias Robinson, Johnson and McAlister, a former convict of Atlanta, Georgia.

The murder for which he was sought occurred the night of July 11, 1924. Miller, accompanied by Mrs. Grace Asbury, a waitress of Elmhurst, Illinois was riding in an automobile at Frankfort. Constable Ernest Miller of Green Garden, 40 years old, stopped them for questioning.

The man at the wheel suddenly whipped out a gun and shot the constable thru the heart, killing him instantly. Constable Miller fell to the road without having a chance to use his own gun.

The slayer escaped but Mrs. Asbury was captured by Cook county highway police a few hours later and identified her companion to local authorities. When the case went before the next grand jury no indictment was returned against her and she was freed to return to her husband at Elmhurst. Miller was indicted for murder.

Thru information furnished by Mrs. Asbury, John Walker then the sheriff of Will County and Robert Martin, then state's attorney, obtained his picture and finger prints from the Atlanta penitentiary and from army officials. The slayer was a former soldier.

They learned that he deserted from the army after committing larceny, but was captured in 1918 and sentenced to Atlanta for five years. He was released on parole in 1920 and discharged in 1922.

At the time of the slaying he was riding in an automobile stolen from E. H. Edwards of Niles, Mich., the city where Miller lived.

The bureau of identification telegram received Monday morning by Sheriff Oliver Flint of Will County, stated that a man named George Martin, suffering from frozen feet, was a patient at the Toledo county hospital. Toledo police took his fingerprints and forwarded them to Washington.

There it was found the prints were those of the missing Miller, according to John Hoover, director of the bureau of identification.

"Martin" was frozen severely while hitch-hiking near Toledo that it was necessary to amputate all his toes, the telegram stated. He has been in the hospital since December 14.

Hiram L. Williamson,
Secretary
Illinois State Association

The fire marshal's division of Illinois, under the direction of S. L. Le-greid, retiring state fire marshal, has been engaged in rounding up what is believed to be the most extensive arson ring ever uncovered in the state. Activities covered central and southern Illinois and extended to several other states. In connection with the investigation 15 persons are under indictment because of their alleged part in causing various fires.

Problems of conflicting taxation between the federal government and the 48 states of the Union will come up for discussion at a meeting of the Interstate Conference of Legislators in Washington, February 3, it has been announced by the American Legislator's association. The conference will be the first to be participated in by members of the legislatures of all states. Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois has indicated that he will appoint delegates to the conference to represent him.

Expenditures for building in Illinois during 1932 were the smallest in 12 years, according to the record of the department of labor. Data is available from 1920 only. For 45 Illinois cities, the total estimated expenditures authorized by permits dropped $3.2 per cent from 1931, the previous low year of the 12-year period.

Expressing commendation of the work of the men who are administering the state's unemployment relief funds, Gov. Henry Horner has indicated that he is contemplating a plan that will provide work for some of the unemployed who are partaking of relief funds. This indication came with the governor's announcement of the appointment of A. R. H. Atwood of Palatine, as assistant director of the state's department of labor. The plan is to find employment for those who receive relief, devising employment that will not conflict with that already being done.

The docket for the February term of the state Supreme court will not be a heavy one. January 18 was the last day for filing cases and a limited number were received. The constitutionality of the law of 1919, pensioning judges, is attacked in a case filed by County Clerk William Bowley of Boone county. The Circuit court issued a writ of mandamus directing the clerk to pay William C. De Wolf, former county judge, a pension. An appeal was taken. The law provides a pension for judges of one-half pay at the rate of their last year's salary for those who have reached the age of sixty-five and have served 24 years on the bench.

A delegation representing the Illinois State Teachers' association conferred recently with Gov. Henry Horner on proposed legislation affecting the teachers. The delegation was headed by Superintendent of Public Instruction Francis G. Blair; Robert C. Moore, secretary of the state association; and Senator N. M. Mason of Oglesby. They commended the governor for the part of his inaugural address on education, in which he urged consolidation of rural school districts, consolidation of rural education and financing to lighten the tax burden and a study of the subject of one-room schools.

An Illinois-Mississippi river cruise is being planned as the annual tour of the University of Illinois Art Extension committee next June. The trip will start from Peoria on June 12 and the party will return June 18. It will include a day and evening in St. Louis, a trip through the Ozarks of southern Illinois, an evening in the city of Cape Girardeau, a few hours at Chester and vicinity, perhaps inland side trips to Rushville and Pittsfield, and a ride through the apple orchards of Calhoun county.

With both land and unemployed men available, the new commission on unemployment is considering ways and means of getting the men to the land. Henry A. Wheeler, chairman of the commission, recently called a meeting of members at which preliminary plans were considered.

Director Stuart Pierson of the state department of agriculture attended the annual meeting of the Illinois Association of Agricultural Fairs, held at Galesburg on January 23 and 24. The appropriation to be asked by the fairs at the session of the legislature will not be boosted but an effort will be made to prevent a recurrence of the deficit in the fair funds to aid county and agricultural fairs. The legislative committee of the association will draft a bill, making changes in the state law.

The Legislative Voters' league has submitted suggestions to the state senate which have been adopted by that body in the interest of efficiency. The suggestions include the decrease in the number of standing committees, limiting the number of committees on which a senator shall serve to six, and adopting a plan to keep a record of meetings of committees, showing the attendance of members, the name of each person appearing before the committee, and the vote of each member on all motions, bills, resolutions and amendments acted upon.

A statewide, every-county mobilization of the dry forces, for a two-day meeting in Springfield Tuesday and Wednesday, January 24 and 25, was held by the Illinois Conference of Organizations Supporting the Eighteenth Amendment. The object of the meeting was to urge members of the legislature to vote against repealing the present prohibition laws and to formulate legislation to curb the liquor traffic if the present state prohibition laws are repealed.

Sales tax bills, supported by the state administration for unemployment relief, have been offered in both the senate and the house. It is expected that the two houses will hold a joint-public hearing on them. Providing for a tax of 2 per cent on the business of selling tangible personal property at retail, the measures exempt gasoline and agricultural products sold by the farmer to the consumer. It is estimated that they will raise more than $45,000,000 for relief.

Gov. Henry Horner has announced that he will ask the legislature to pass an emergency appropriation of $100,000 for the Illinois National Guard. The last general assembly passed an appropriation of $150,000 to be used by the guard in the event it was necessary to call out troops in any part of the state, but all but a small amount of the sum appropriated two years ago for emergencies has been used.

Governor Horner's new tax commission soon will launch a survey of Illinois' antiquated revenue system and also will look into tax laws of other states preparatory to reorganizing the Illinois system. The commission will draft an amendment to the state constitution to eliminate restrictions no longer regarded necessary. New members of the commission are Scott W. Lucas, Havana, chairman, and Simeon Leland and Bernet Hodes, Chicago.

With his retirement this month as chief highway engineer and acting superintendent of highways, Frank T. Sheets brings to conclusion 23 years of public service in state highway work. During his 12 years as head of the division of highways, he has had direct charge of the construction of 8,356 miles of state bond issue roads and the maintenance of the state highway system as completed, involving $405,000,000. During the same period, he has exercised general supervision of the construction of 3,245 miles of principal county roads making a total of 11,601 miles.

Bills to combine municipal and judicial elections in Chicago, to save expense, have been introduced in both houses of the general assembly. Although most of the bills apply only to Cook county, one permits cities, villages, townships, towns, school districts and park districts to postpone their elections until June. Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, counsel for the Chicago board of election commissioners, and a group of lawyers who assisted him in drawing up the bills for the legislature, recently appeared before the house of representatives in furtherance of this legislation.

Gov. Henry Horner has under way a survey of the personnel and activities of the 11 code departments under his jurisdiction. This survey is being conducted by a firm of Chicago efficiency engineers. Each employee in the 11 code departments, from the lowest to the highest degree, is required to fill out a questionnaire, containing a complete explanation of his or her duties. The survey is being conducted because Governor Horner favors consolidation of departments and divisions and because he has proposed to cut the operating costs of government.

Representative William G. Thon of Oak Park has introduced a bill for prevention of blindness among newborn babies. The bill, house bill 161, has been drafted by constitutional experts and has the endorsement of many prominent state organizations. According to backers of the bill, Illinois has 15 times as much blindness among babies at birth as New York state where legislation has been enacted which requires that babies be safeguarded at birth.

Planning a reorganization of the division of insurance to strengthen the state's regulation over companies writing policies in Illinois, Gov. Henry Horner has appointed Attorney Ernest Palmer of Evanston as superintendent of insurance to succeed Harry W. Hanson of Princeton. Palmer, who practices law in Chicago, has been general counsel for the Chicago board of underwriters since 1923. In 1912 he was an assistant attorney in the Interior department at Washington. Governor Horner states that Mr. Palmer is one of the foremost authorities on insurance law in the country. Mr. Hanson retires with an excellent record as he is considered one of the best insurance men in the state.

The entire Lincoln homestead should be open to visitors and the upstairs rooms now occupied by the custodian should be restored, the board of state park advisers recommends in a report to the legislature. The board also urged more adequate parking space with a paved driveway around Lincoln's tomb. In addition, recommendations were submitted for changes and improvements at Old Salem State park, Grant's home at Galena, Black Hawk State park at Rock Island and Pere Marquette State park west of Alton.

THE MAN WHO WAS BORN in A LOG CABIN

HE WAS born in a one-room cabin in the backwoods of Kentucky, and died in a tiny bedroom in a boarding house at the nation's Capital, while President of the United States.

He never had all told more than a year's schooling in the most elementary subjects, yet he lived to write impeccable English, and to be judged by learned professors as master of purest literary style.

He grew up far removed from cultural influences and the niceties of polite society, yet wooed and won in marriage a Kentucky aristocrat, a society belle, and an accomplished linguist, Miss Mary Todd.

He never had the heart to kill any living thing, looked with disfavor on fire arms, but became by virtue of his high office, the commander-in-chief of the Union forces in a war which resulted in half a million slain.

He was smooth shaven for fifty-one of his fifty-six years, and grew a beard the winter before his inauguration, in good-natured compliance with the suggestion of a little girl who thought the change might improve his looks.

He was a voracious reader as a boy and young man, borrowing many a treasured volume, but he never owned a library of as many as a hundred volumes, excluding his law books.

He did not unite with a church, though he was a frequent attendant; sometimes called a "free thinker," he was unusually familiar with the Bible and during his Presidency, on his own confession was a praying man.

He was often of a melancholy mood, subject to seasons of gloom and grief, yet was as often buoyant, laughing heartily over a good joke and told droll stories inimitably.

He loved greatly all children, and was most indulgent with his own, permitting "Tad" to make a play room of his office in the White House.

He never could wear gloves with ease; formal society functions bored him, and at his first inauguration he was puzzled as to the disposal of his gold-headed cane and high hat—until his great protagonist, Stephen A. Douglas, came to his relief.

He wrote a neat hand, devised clear and uninvolved sentences, avoided big words, never padded his speeches, was frequently laconic and pointedly brief.

He was fond of poetry, wrote verses of a homely sort and liked best poems of a somber or pathetic appeal, as for example, "The Last Leaf" and "O Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud?"

He observed the faults and foibles of his friends and associates, but seldom commented upon their shortcomings and never rebuked them either in public or private; for a notable instance—William H. Herndon and his temperate habits.

He revered George Washington, admired Thomas Jefferson, at one time idolized Henry Clay, read with avidity the speeches of Daniel Webster.

He numbered among his friends an unusually large company of ministers of the Gospel, yet when he ran for President, only three of the twenty-odd ministers in Springfield voted for him.

He loved to sit with the "boys" about the stove in the village store on winter evenings, crack jokes, and listen to the gossip of the neighborhood, delighted in minstrel shows, was tickled by the antics of clowns and comedians, thought a traveling circus was great fun.

He had one of the best "forgetteries" of all our public men, thus he "forgot" the shabby treatment he received at the hands of Edwin M. Stanton in Cincinnati, 1855, and appointed him secretary of war in his cabinet.

He was indifferent as to his personal attire, yet was distinctive in his choice of a high topped hat, long-tailed coat, and a black bow tie, worn around a low turned-down collar.

He was in life mercilessly criticized, treacherously misrepresented, cruelly maligned, and basely slandered, and in death he was all but deified.

He was scrupulously honest, long suffering, and patient beyond most mortals, magnanimous and just, forgiving, and a stranger to hate.

He was not a demigod, but very human; he made mistakes and profited by them; he was a lover of his kind and made generous allowance for the imperfections of humanity, and because of these all too rare virtues "Now he belongs to the ages."—Detroit News.

Abraham Lincoln Always Of, By and For the People

"So long as there is a man willing to work, but unable to find employment, the hours of labor are too long."

The words quoted above are not those of a modern-day economist; they came from the mind and lips of one who long ago had his finger on the pulse of American affairs. He came from the people and rose to high estate and esteem by mere force of character and indomitable will. He was more self-educated than learned. He held no degree from a great university; he discovered no new planets; he flew no oceans; he amassed no colossal fortune. Yet he did, at a time when it required a degree of courage rare in history, stand firm for his convictions. Class meant little to him beyond a division set aside for self-centered ends. He was of, by and for the people.

He had visions, yet was not visionary. His judgment may not have been infallible, yet it was based on logic and foresight. His work was arduous, yet he never turned aside. Hard labor was his portion in early life, his choice later. Of lowly origin, he rose to heights never dreamed of. Outwardly uncouth, perhaps, but polished as the finest steel beneath. Rough at times, perhaps, yet tender as a woman to those in distress, he who spoke the words quoted saw far into the future and the thought came from the heart. He was the workers' friend.

He is so still. As long as the world exists, down through the ages will reverberate Abraham Lincoln's forceful words of consolation and encouragement to all who earn a livelihood by the sweat of the brow. The world may never see his like again, but his memory will never perish.

Stand with anybody that stands right. Stand with him while he is right and part with him when he goes wrong.—Lincoln.

Slaves Freed January 1, 1863

The proclamation of emancipation, which freed all the negro slaves, was proclaimed by Lincoln, September 22, 1862, and became effective January 1, 1863.

Invents New Type Soda Fountain

Druggists, Ice Cream Companies and the General Public will be greatly interested in a new type of electrically refrigerated Soda Fountain which has just been placed on the market, known as "Walrus 100% Dry Refrigerated Soda Fountains." There is no brine in the ice cream cabinet, no water bath around cooling coils, thus there can be no leaks. Brick ice cream, ices and bulk ice cream should, each have its own degree of coldness, and this new type Fountain provides for that, which has never heretofore been done successfully. The carbonated and city water are instantaneously chilled in large volume by an entirely new method of heat absorption, and the fruits and syrups are kept at a lower temperature than ever before.

This new type Soda Fountain is also a safeguard to public health, because it is 100% Dry Refrigerated; no moisture to foul conditions. Further, the Fountain is a great money saver and business getter for the merchant, who now well realizes what the advantages of 100% Dry Soda Fountain Refrigeration would mean to his business.

These new type Walrus 100% Dry Refrigerated Soda Fountains, (invented and manufactured only by the Walrus Mfg. Co., Decatur, Ill.) are destined to lead the field for time to come. They are backed by 32 years' successful Soda Fountain manufacturing experience.—Adv.

No Difficulty at All for Man of Medicine

The doctor's patient looked terribly worn out.

"Oh, doctor," he said, "I don't know what's wrong with me. I'm never well. I can't tell you why."

"Where's the pain?" asked the medical man brusquely.

"I don't know, doctor," continued the patient. "I can't quite locate it, but it's something that leaves me quite done up, as if something inside isn't working properly. Still, I'm sure you will know what's wrong."

The doctor nodded. "I see," he replied. "Here's some medicine. It is for cases exactly like yours. Take it from time to time for as long as it suits you. I can't tell you just now how often or how long or what doses to take, but when you are cured you can come back to me for some more."

Mother of 7—Still Young

THE woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old. Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

"How these suds save work!" ...she tells mother

"REALLY—I can't understand why anyone still bothers with old-fashioned soaps! See what thick, creamy suds Rinso gives. Grease soaks loose from the dishes without any help from me. All I need to do is to rinse them in hot water—and let them drain dry. The dirtiest dishes—the greasiest pots and pans—soak spotless this easy way."

Cup for cup, Rinso gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water. Millions of women use it on washday for whiter clothes without scrubbing or boiling. Wonderful suds for glassware, porcelain, tile, woodwork—and all cleaning. So economical! Get the BIG thrifty package.

Beware the Cough or Cold that Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

DATES TOOTHsome, NUTRITIOUS

THE perfect date, colorful, translucent, and altogether delicious, is now an American product, thanks to the untiring effort of our date growers. Arabian dates are still shipped into our country in large quantities, but nothing so far has reached the perfection of the home grown.

It will probably be some time before we can supply the demand with the home product, for the date is so well liked and is used for confections so largely, as well as for ordinary food.

With a handful of nuts and a half dozen dates, a glass of orange juice, one need not worry over calories or hunger.

Dates are enjoyed in bread, cake, cookies, chopped with nuts and molded into bars, stuffed with nuts or preserved fruit or fondant; added to salads they give just the note of sweetness that any salad needs. They take the place of raisins or combine with them in desserts of various kinds.

Date Pie.—Cook one pound of dates that have been pitted, with one cupful of water and one tablespoonful of lemon juice; cook until a thick paste is formed, then add two tablespoonfuls of orange juice and let stand until cold. Bake a pastry shell and fill with the mixture, top with lightly sweetened cream and serve.

As filling for sandwiches to give the children for luncheon, they are perfectly desirable. In stuffed dates, try any or all of the following:

Peanut butter moistened with orange juice and a little cream.

Use fondant to which chopped cherries, ginger, candied peel has been added.

Almonds finely chopped, mixed with a little grated maple sugar and cream to moisten.

CHILDREN'S BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

MERRY LITTLE BREEZES LEARN THE JOY OF WORK

There's nothing like some honest work To make the minutes swiftly fly; To fill the day with golden joy And set the hours skipping by.

ALL summer long the Merry Little Breezes of Old Mother West Wind had played on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest. To dance and play was what they were made for. At least that is what they seemed to think. Why anyone should work was something they couldn't understand in spite of the fact that Old Mother West Wind herself worked every day. When early in the morning she would turn them out of the big bag to play they would watch her go away to turn the windmills that pumped the water for the cows, to blow white-sailed ships across the distant ocean, to sweep away the smoke from great cities, and they would wonder why she did these things when it was so much easier just to do nothing at all or to romp and play.

But even playing becomes tiresome, especially when nobody will play with you. And now that the busy autumn had come there was no one to play with. Everybody was too busy to play. So it came about that the Merry Little Breezes because they could think of nothing else to do, offered to help Striped Chipmunk, of whom they were very fond. They offered to shake down nuts from the trees that he might more easily fill his secret storehouse. You know Striped Chipmunk is not much of a climber. He can climb if he has to, but he never feels at home in the trees and never likes to get far above the ground. So for his winter stores he depends on what he can find on the ground, and let me tell you there are no brighter eyes than those of Striped Chipmunk when it comes to finding nuts and seeds hidden under brown leaves.

But there are others quite as eager as Striped Chipmunk to find nuts for secret storehouses, especially his cousins, Happy Jack Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel, and because they are bigger and stronger and very, very selfish, they often chase Striped Chipmunk away. So is it any wonder that when the Merry Little Breezes offered to shake down the brown nuts for him, Striped Chipmunk chased his tail for pure happiness?

Happy Jack and Chatterer were still quarreling and their voices sounded harsh and angry as the Merry Little Breezes danced along ahead of Striped Chipmunk to a tree some distance from where Happy Jack and Chatterer were calling each other names and worse than wasting the golden minutes of that beautiful day. Striped Chipmunk looked up and his eyes sparkled. The night before Jack Frost had opened the prickly burrs and Striped Chipmunk could see the brown nuts ready to drop. The Merry Little Breezes shook a branch and down rattled the brown nuts. Striped Chipmunk squealed with joy and stuffed the pockets of his cheeks until the Merry Little Breezes shouted with laughter because he looked so funny. Then he scampered away to his secret storehouse. Back he came and did it all over again. As soon as he had picked up the last nut the Merry Little Breezes shook another branch and down showered more brown nuts, rolling under the brown leaves on the ground. It was great fun. It seemed as if those bright eyes of Striped Chipmunk saw where every nut rolled to. Of course they didn't, but those they didn't see his keen little nose found, so it amounted to the same thing.

Never had the Merry Little Breezes had such a good time. Some times they would tease Striped Chipmunk by shaking down only a few at a time. Then they would shake a branch so hard that the brown nuts would fly in all directions. But Striped Chipmunk didn't mind. All he wanted was to have the nuts on the ground where he could get them. Back and forth, back and forth, back and forth he scampered between his secret storehouse and the place where the brown nuts were being shaken down and in his heart was a song of joy. And there was a like joy in the hearts of the Merry Little Breezes, for they had discovered the joy of something to do, of work. Never had a day passed so quickly. They had helped another and in so doing had won for themselves a great happiness.

"We'll come again, tomorrow!" they cried, as they saw Old Mother West Wind coming across the Green Meadows with her big bag in which to take them to their home behind the Purple Hills.

"Thank you!" cried Striped Chipmunk, as he sat down to rest his weary legs.

Worry and Trouble

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I'VE seen a lot whose luck was bad, And heard about the loss they had, And others in the neighborhood Who hadn't yet, but thought they would.

The losers didn't seem so sad— That's what I never understood: The ones who hadn't lost a thing Did mostly all the worrying.

The losers used to laugh and say, "Well, that is over anyway, Beyond a question or a doubt, And nothing more to fret about." The ones who worried all the day, The ones who looked all pestered out, Were those who ran ahead and met Bad luck that hadn't happened yet.

It seems that way with all our woe: The ones who trouble really know Don't worry much; but those who fear

That things might maybe happen here (Although they may not happen so)

The worried seem, the sad appear— Though trouble is a thing you see, And worry only what may be.

TRY THIS!

When children won't eat—and won't gain weight—

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little syrup of figs will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A POUND A WEEK. Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, syrup of figs will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food.

The claims made for California Syrup of Figs are true and it will do the same for you—if you get genuine CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs. Don't accept any substitute.

Drank Poison While Suffering From Shock, Coroner's Jury Finds

The next witness to testify was a neighbor, Miss Christina Schmidt. She said Mrs. Hurley was highly esteemed in the community and was a wonderful neighbor. She stated Mrs. Hurley told her of her domestic troubles Friday afternoon and had told her that her husband had told her he was going to have his life insurance policies made over to his mother as he considered her more worthy than his wife.

Miss Schmidt in her testimony said that Violet, the five year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hurley, came over to the former's home Saturday noon crying at the top of her voice that her mama was lying on the bed and was unable to speak and she thought she was dead which proved true when Miss Schmidt got over to the Hurley home.

After hearing the concluding testimony, the coroner and the jury in charge of August Werner as foreman, retired into an adjoining room and after a short deliberation, returned the following verdict:

"In the matter of its inquisition on the body of Carrie Hurley, deceased, held at Mokena on the 6th day of February, A. D. 1933,

"We, the undersigned jurors sworn to inquire of the death of Carrie Hurley on oath do find that she came to her death by accidental poisoning from drinking a portion of Cresolene at her home in the village of Mokena, Saturday, February 4, 1933 at about 11:30 a. m., while suffering from acute nervous shock and worry. We, the jury, from the evidence heard do not believe she took this fluid with suicidal intent, but as a protest against domestic conditions and with hope of bettering these conditions."

August Werner
Clarence Werner
Thomas Moore
Fred Steinhagen
Albert Hellmuth
Fred Hentsch

Carrie Hurley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cappel of Mokena, was born near Mokena, June 7, 1897. In 1911 she was confirmed by Rev. G. H. Sieveking in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena. When a local Camp Fire Girls Council was organized in 1915 she became an ardent member of same. She was a Sunday school teacher in St. John's Sunday school for many years.

June 9, 1923 she was united in marriage with Gilbert Hurley of Mokena at Crown Point, Indiana. To this union three children were born, two sons Arthur and Jack and one daughter Violet, who with the father, the parents of the departed and one brother Walter Cappel and many relatives survive. A legion of dear friends also mourn her untimely demise. Mrs. Hurley had a winning manner and a happy disposition. She was a wonderful wife, mother and friend and will be greatly missed.

She was a member of the Ladies Aid Society of the St. John Evangelical church. She was also a member of the Mokena Camp of the Royal Neighbors.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in one of the worst snow storms experienced in this section in many years. A short service was held at the late home, concluding in the St. John Evangelical church, Rev. E. J. Moritz, officiating. Many very beautiful floral offerings banked the casket.

Mr. Leon Tonn sang two very fine solos.

The snow plow of Frankfort township in charge of highway commissioner Emil D. Cappel and manned with a force of workers cleared the streets in the village and from the late home to the church. The Wolf road was cleared from Mokena to the St. John cemetery south of Mokena where burial took place.

As the hearse of the West End Funeral Home of Chicago Heights became stalled in a deep snow drift on the Lincoln highway near Mat-teson, the casket had to be taken to the cemetery in a bob sled.

Homemakers Urged To Attend Household Science Meeting

Mothers and homemakers of Illinois are urged to take a "useful" holiday and attend the Annual State Meeting of the Department of Household Science in the Universalist Church at Joliet, February 22, 23 and 24. These three days will contain a world of pleasure and also impart endless information and ideas to carry back to their respective homes and make use of. In these days when so much is being expected of women and dependent upon them, especially rural women, they need such a get-together as this will afford to talk over their problems and receive some solutions and additional working material.

This three-days' program will contain problems in homemaking discussed by leaders in that field; there will be demonstrations of meat preparation and canning, the latter being of such vast importance in the utilization of farm products; ways and means of profitable gardening, as well as the distribution and sale of farm commodities by women will be fully discussed; the ever important field of health will receive its share of prominence; inter-woven among all of this is the ever dominant theme of the Home, the Center of American Life, helping us to make it attractive and pleasant; and since the human needs food for the mind as well as the body, there will be no lack of the inspirational.

Surely no woman who can possibly get there, can afford to miss such a varied and worthwhile program as will be presented at Joliet those three days, February 22, 23 and 24. Look for more detailed information of each subject as will appear periodically in these columns.

Plan your work to come and be with us the entire three days.

Outlaw's Ghost In New Mexico Program

It is said that the ghostly voice of Billy the Kid, one of the most dread characters in the history of the old Southwest, will be heard next Wednesday night over 23 NBC stations when Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company Radio entertainer, goes exploring into New Mexico's past and present.

Wells begins the broadcast with an interesting description of many of the state's scenic highlights. One apartment in Carlsbad Caverns would provide standing room for the entire population of Detroit, says this famous teller of tall but true tales. Then comes the scene in which Wells meets the shade of Billy the Kid in a moonlit graveyard at Ft. Sumner, and hears how the bandit met his death at the hands of Sheriff Pat Garrett.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ on Wednesday night at 9:30 to 10 p. m.

MOKENA

TO A DEAR FRIEND— CARRIE CAPPEL HURLEY

She who was a friend of all is gone! Gone on the journey into another land, lead by the Hand of Him whom she trusted and knew while here on this earth.

Only a few short years ago, she was a happy robust, carefree child, living, loving, and even then helping all she could; then growing into joyous happy, carefree adolescence then on into young womanhood, knowing the joys of mating, when all the world was nothing but love, and finally knowing the blessedness of motherhood. And what a wonderful mother! Cheerfully she bore the responsibilities of mature life, realizing its sorrows, having lived a life that required the strength and courage of a soldier.

And now gone, leaving nothing but the precious clay consigned to the benign bosom of Mother Earth, a mound, alone with the snows of winter, the soft breath of spring, the glinting sunshine of summer and the falling autumn leaves.

Is there a balm for this desolation? O, yes, indeed, the definite assurance that this soul is now with God who sent it and with the Master who said: "Come unto Me all ye who are heavy laden and I will give you rest" and whose Hand with sympathy and love guided the last journey.

And I know that this beautiful soul has returned to its Maker as a tired child runs and cuddles on its mother's bosom.

And we who are left behind, have the blessed belief, that whatever troubles may come to us who are waiting, we have the assurance that in time, we too, will be guided to the Great Beyond and there behold again this friend with the same cherry smile and "How are you? That's fine."

The influence of her kindly spirit will linger with us in all the familiar ways.

And, so, goodbye Carrie, we loved you in life, we love you in death.

A FRIEND

The parents and friends of Carlos Hall were quite surprised this week when he announced his secret marriage on November 8th, 1932 to Miss Virginia Voight of Joliet. Mrs. Hall's father, Charles H. Voight is well known in Joliet political circles, being secretary of the Republican town central committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ferguson of Joliet entertained at a 6 o'clock dinner in their home Saturday, the teachers of the Mokena Public school and their friends. Bridge was played and a lovely evening enjoyed. Mrs. Ferguson is a teacher in the Mokena school.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all relatives, neighbors and friends for their many acts of kindness and sympathy shown us during our bereavement in the death of our beloved wife, mother, daughter and sister. We wish to thank Rev. E. J. Moritz for his comforting words, Mr. Leon Tonn for his songs, Mrs. E. P. Krapp for the music and all those who sent flowers and those who donated the use of their automobiles.

GILBERT H. HURLEY AND CHILDREN, MR. AND MRS. JOHN CAPPEL AND WALTER CAPPEL.

A benefit bunco party will be held in the St. Mary hall on the night of February 23rd. Everybody is cordially invited.

Mr. Charles Schmidt, son of Mrs. Emma Schmidt, who underwent a serious operation in the St. Joseph hospital two weeks ago, is expected to leave the hospital this week end, and will be in his brother's home in Joliet for a while.

Mrs. Bielfeldt of Joliet, daughter of Mrs. Emma Schmidt fell at her home Tuesday morning and broke her right arm in two places.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Hall attended the funeral of the latter's step mother, Mrs. Charles Voight held in Joliet Wednesday afternoon.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Mrs. Hattie Balle Ganey, mother of Mrs. Henry Popp received the news of the death of her only sister Mrs. Mary Balle Fairfield in St. Louis, Mo., last Wednesday, January 25th following a stroke. She was 79 years old. She came of a well known old family, who were among the early pioneers of St. Louis. The family is of French descent.

Mrs. Fairfield was the principal of the Dozier school in St. Louis for many years and was widely known as an educator.

Surviving are her sister Mrs. Ganey of the Lincoln Estates, 2 nephews, 3 nieces and nine grand nephews and nieces. Mrs. Fairfield was the wife of an army officer and was a member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the G. A. R., and was accorded a military funeral. Rev. James Kehoe officiated. Burial was in the family lot in Calvary cemetery, St. Louis.

Mrs. Ganey and her daughter, Mrs. Henry Popp attended the funeral, Mrs. Popp driving the car down and back after just being out of a sick bed.

Mrs. Ganey and Mrs. Popp appreciate the many expressions of sympathy accorded them by their many friends and neighbors in the Lincoln Estates.

Charles Reilly recently visited in Chicago with his aunt and fiancé.

The Wm. Martin Part of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will meet at the home of Post Commander John Jones this Saturday night.

The boys of the Veterans of Foreign Wars are hoping that the weather man will be lenient with them and send good weather by February 25th so they can hold their Washington party and dance at the Frankfort hall that night.

Lincoln Estates was snow bound all day Tuesday and part of Wednesday when the Lincoln highway was buried under heavy snow drifts. Many trucks and autos were stalled along the highway. Even tho the state snow plows were on the job, the high wind blew the drifting snow in the cleared portions of the highway soon as the snow plows passed thru.

Catholic Daughters of America to Meet

One of the most important events in 1933 is the twelfth bi-annual Illinois State Convention of the Catholic Daughters of America. Thru the invitation of the Chicago Assembly, Chicago will be host for the sixth time in May.

Mrs. Emma Vaughn has been the State Regent for the past four years and her vast knowledge of the duties required to have a state convention wisely chose Miss Elizabeth O'Brien, past grand regent of McHale Englewood Court, as general chairman of this affair. Miss O'Brien will be assisted by several co-chairmen and the combined efforts will assure all a pleasant time who attend this convention.

The Catholic Daughters of America, is a National Organization with a membership of over 200,000 women and Chicago is proud to claim 2,000 of these members.

QUILTS AND MORE QUILTS
A quilting party was held at the home of Mrs. Emil Kampe by her club girls one day the past week. They worked on a clover design quilt made out of blue and 12 inch blocks. The blue blocks are applied, white material is used for blossom petals, and green material for the leaves.

The girls had a great time together. While they were busy sewing, Mrs. Kampe was busy in her kitchen preparing a dainty dinner.

She told her club girls that this depression brings on worry, but she said, "I find by doing good, instructive work together with cheerful folks, makes me forget entirely about it."

Music is a part of her home and had a place in the later afternoon meeting.

Here is a good recipe on how to cure worrying. It is signed by Mrs. Kampe, and is passed on to others by one of her club girls:

"Do a good deed for someone every day."

"Take part in healthful recreation."

"A good joke, and a good laugh is good for you."

"Your faith in God to whom you can tell your troubles."

"A cheerful, happy life, comes from cheerful, happy thoughts."

Try it and see.

"Jeb's dollars aren't as plentiful as they were awhile back, so you can bet he's pretty careful of them. The other day we were talking about economizing and I asked Jeb what he could least afford to be without on his farm. Like a shot he answered, 'My telephone!' It's a time and money saver too often, Jeb said, for him to be without it. And Jeb's right! It's cheaper to have a telephone than to be without one. Experience proves that."

POULTRY-RAISERS— Want more eggs?

✓ THIS NEW WATER WARMER HELPS
GET MAXIMUM EGG PRODUCTION

only $2.50 complete

Keeping the poultry house lighted in the early morning and evening during winter months gives hens a long, active day. They eat more feed, drink more water—and lay more eggs.

But hens can't drink frozen water. The benefits of night lighting are lost unless a means of warming their drinking water is provided. We recommend this electric warmer just introduced by the General Electric Company. It is particularly inexpensive and trouble-free. Note these features:

1. It is made of flexible rubber so it can be used in almost any pan without fitting or clamping.
2. A long 10-foot rubber cord plugs it into any electric outlet.
3. It keeps water free of ice crust in containers up to 12-quart capacity.
4. It will not burn out even if the water runs low.
5. It has been carefully tested in the Public Service Company's testing laboratory. Quality is guaranteed.
6. It costs only $2.50 complete, and uses very little current.

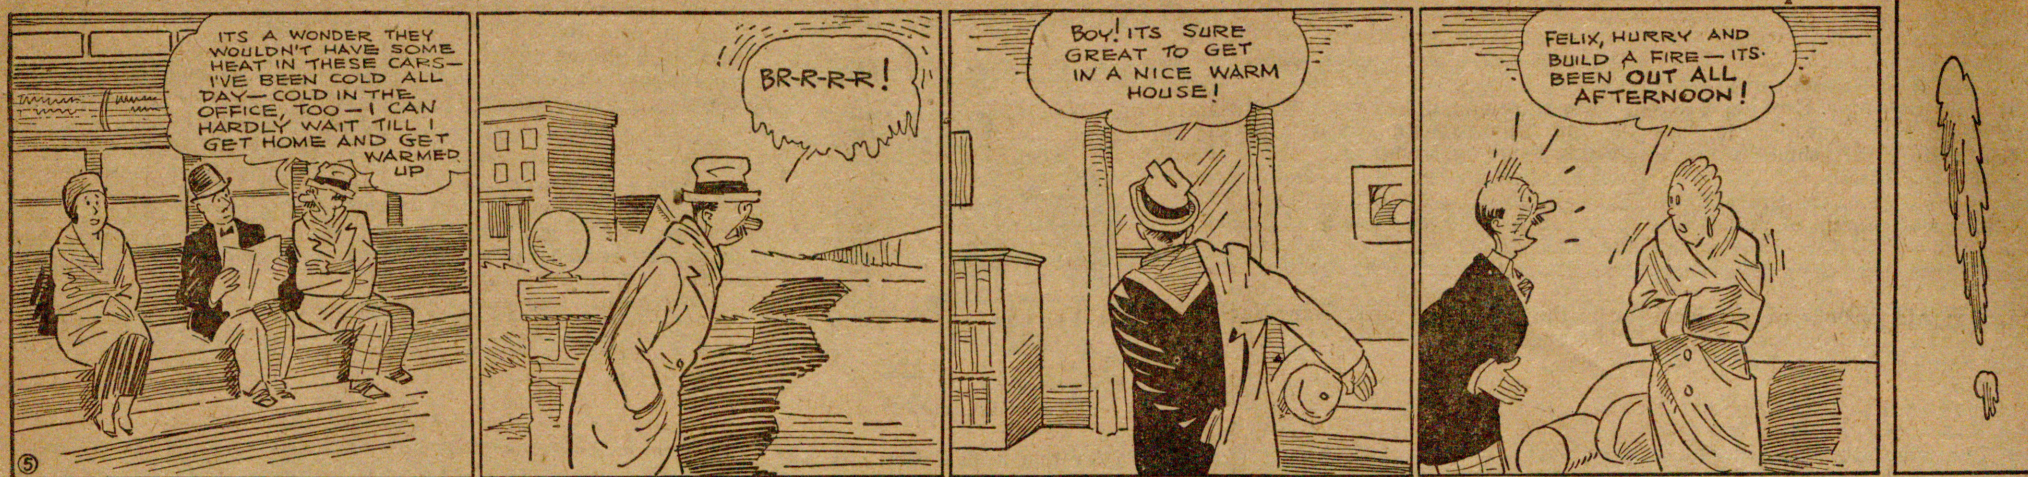

FOR A FREE DEMONSTRATION of this electric water warmer, write or phone your nearest Public Service office. One of our representatives familiar with poultry raising problems will call on you and show you how this warmer works. You won't be putting yourself under any obligation. (Other General Electric dealers also carry this equipment.)

JESUS TEACHING BY PARABLES
—FOUR KINDS OF HEARERS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 4:1-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples. John 15:8.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Story Jesus Told.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Right Way to Hear.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Hear.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Fruitful Christian Living.

In order to understand why Christ at this time began teaching in parables, we must consider the nature of the hour in his ministry. Opposition to him was becoming more definite and hostile. The parabolic method was not employed by Jesus until the rulers had set their hearts against him. When in the light of his wonderful works they turned against him and attributed his works to the devil (Mark 3:22), he denounced them in scathing terms and began to teach in parables in fulfillment of Isaiah 6:10.

A great multitude gathered to hear him at the seaside (v. 1), so that in order to escape the pressure of the crowd he was obliged to enter a boat. From the boat as a pulpit, he taught many things in parables. In the parable now under consideration, the sower and the seed are the same in all instances, but the results are entirely different. The difference lies in the condition of the soil. The central purpose of the teaching of this parable is to show that the results of preaching the Word of God depend upon the condition of the human heart.

I. The Wayside (vv. 4:15).
The wayside means not the road but the tract between the fields beaten down by the hoofs of animals and the feet of men. Because the soil was unbroken and uncultivated the seed could not get underneath the surface, and therefore was devoured by the fowls that came along (v. 4). The great truth taught here is that the heart unbroken and hard is not fit soil for the gospel. Such a heart it penetrates not, but lies loosely upon its surface. The gospel is not given recognition by such hearts as God's means for restoring them unto himself. Because of this condition the evil one finds some way to snatch away the truth (v. 15).

II. The Stony Ground (vv. 5, 6, 16, 17).
This means not stones mixed with soil, but stones with a thin layer of soil on top of them. With such condition the seed springs up quickly and likewise scorches quickly because it has not depth of earth. The great lesson is that hearts superficially impressed receive the word with joy, but when affliction or persecution arises, for the word's sake immediately they are offended. They wither away and die.

III. The Thorny Ground (vv. 7, 18, 19).
In this case the ground is good but has thorns in it. It is mellow enough and has sufficient depth but has not been cleared of the thorns. Such really hear the Word, but "the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful" (v. 19). The thorny ground hearers of this world are those:

1. Who are so immersed in worldliness, business and anxious cares that the good seed cannot come to fruitage.

2. Who are rich. Anxious care in business brings riches and the effect of riches is to blunt the spiritual perception of men and women, thereby rendering them unsuspensible to God's call to higher things in life.

3. Who are running after the pleasures of life. Many of the enjoyments of the world may be innocent in themselves but they attract so much attention and consume so much energy and time that Bible reading, meditation, and prayer are crowded out. All these things choke the Word.

IV. The Good Ground (vv. 8, 20).
This ground is different from all the rest. It is soft and mellow, and deep and moist. Therefore, it is capable of bringing forth fruit—some one hundred, some sixty, and some thirtyfold. This indicates that even the good ground, the honest hearers, gives forth different degrees of fruitfulness. In the measure that the heart is kept free from worldliness, riches, and pleasure, the good seed matures.

Continuing Love

One cannot think that any holy earthly love will cease, when we shall be like the angels of God in heaven. Love here must shadow our love there, deeper because spiritual.

Trust in God

God will not take away our immortality, because we have so little enjoyed the hope of it. Rest your head, childlike, on the one visible arm of the Paternal Deity, though you cannot see distinctly where the other and outstretched arm is pointing. That leads not wrong.—W. Smith.

The Sabbath

I feel as if God had, by giving the Sabbath, given fifty-two springs in every year.—S. T. Coleridge.

"Nia! nia!" cried the excited Sarah, opening the door for the half-frozen Jim. "You are back; all well?" Jim patted the broad back of the solicitous Ojibwa. "Cold and hungry, Sarah!" he laughed.

"Ah, you not get hurt by dose wild Jibwa? Good!" sputtered the bustling Sarah, brushing the melting snow from Jim's coat.

"No, we've won, Sarah! We've beaten Paradis!"

"Nia! n'go! You find de shamaw, Jingwak?" cried the startled cook, her small eyes, black as buttons, snapping with excitement.

"Yes, Esau's medicine was too strong for him."

While Sarah busied herself with a hot supper for her returned master, Jim stepped across to the trade-house. He closed the slab door against the drive of wind and light snow to find Omar and Esau smoking beside the sheet-iron stove.

"Somethin' dere for you," announced the half-breed with a nod of his black head toward the trade counter.

On the hand-hewn spruce planks lay a white envelope.

Aurore! She had written before she went south and sent it by an Indian! Jim's tanned face was radiant with the joy of the surprise. Her writing! He had never seen it! Aurore had left him her first love letter!

Conscious of the scrutiny of two pairs of black eyes at the stove, Jim thrust the letter, unread, into his pocket and left the room with a mumbled: "I'm starved—go in to eat!"

Loath to read the letter before the curious eyes of his men, Jim crossed to his quarters and entered the living room. "She hasn't forgotten; she's written me! And I've won, Aurore! I've come back, black-eyed sorceress of mine, they can't take you away from me, now!" he said aloud, his voice thick with emotion, as he opened the letter.

"Dear Jim!" it ran, "You've been gone three weeks and I've been so lonely, oh, so lonely for the big-gray-eyed boy who made love so beautifully that day, years ago, on the island."

Then a look, dazed, uncomprehending, drove the joy from his eyes as he read:

"But if you had cared for me as I loved you, you couldn't have gone away. You couldn't have held what you called your duty above love. Every day I have gone alone, somewhere, to fight this thing out, and always find the same answer. I know now that yours is not the mad love I've dreamed of—a love which counts no cost, knows no law. No, Jim, we made a mistake—you and I. But it was beautiful—that day of ours on the island; I'll never forget it."

"Good-by, Jim!"

"AURORE."

The unseeing eyes of Stuart lifted to stare out at the fast darkening lake. His nerveless fingers opened and the letter fell to the floor.

It had come like a knife-thrust in the dark. With his heart quick with love for her she had struck him.

So it had been make-believe, that day on the island? Her eyes, her lips—had lied. For the pleasure of an August day her vanity had demanded the soul of a man, to destroy. Had he stayed, it would have been no different, she would have played the game, and then, as now, cast him aside. After all, there was no heart in her. Red blood, charm, reckless courage, yes; but heart, there was none.

"She Hasn't Forgotten; She's Written Me! And I've Won, Aurore!"

His lips curled bitterly at the memory of her radiant face—her kisses. Again her arms circled his neck in parting. The scent of her dark hair was in his nostrils.

But to wound him this way! Leave this farewell for a man who had toiled and fought through the weeks with only the thought of her—the love of her, to buoy him!

Her first letter—and her last!

CHAPTER XI

Late in the night the body, which days of drudgery with pole and paddle in the race against the freeze-up had numbed with weariness, brought the surcease of sleep to the tortured brain of Jim Stuart. It had been a will-o'-the-wisp, a phantom, the vision of the girl which had companioned him into the heart of Kiwedini. He had had his dream, now he once more faced reality.

In the trade-room, the following morning, Esau, Omar and Jim sat in a council of war.

"Did LeBlond send Paradis to the Sturgeon country?" demanded Jim of his swart counselors, who scowled in thought as their mouths emitted smoke like wet wood. "And if we think he did, do we face him with it or lie low?"

Omar filled his capacious mouth with smoke, and slowly emptied it, before replying: "We lie lak' de fox een heels hole."

Esau nodded in agreement.

"I think that's the game," agreed Jim. "If he thinks Paradis went to Nipigon he won't hear what happened at Sturgeon Lake until the Christmas trade. Now Esau and I start north to get the early fur the first week in December. We'll need two more dog teams. We'll start this morning, Omar, for Expanse, and bring them up on the first sledding."

Omar stared in amazement at his chief. "De cano' weel freeze een, for sure. Een two-week weel we can travel de ice wid de dog," he murmured.

Jim's face darkened. "You're not afraid of being caught by the ice?"

With a shrug of his heavy shoulders the half-breed rose and knocked out his pipe. "All right, we go now wid de wind behind us."

Down the Lake of the Sand Beaches through the gray October day traveled the canoe, seeking to reach the post far to the south before the waterways closed, while the silent sternman wondered what new folly swayed the mind of the man whose paddle tore at the sullen black water. Breaking a lane with their poles through the half-inch ice sheathing the winding inlet of Expanse, the voyagers who had barely nosed out ahead of the fast following freeze-up, at last paddled in to the beach at the headquarters of the company.

At their appearance in the door of the trade-house, the whiskered jaw of Andrew Christie dropped.

"Well, I'll be skinned!"

"Good day, Mr. Christie," said Jim casually. "There was a matter of business that couldn't wait for sled-travel, so Omar and I took a chance."

As the inspector perfunctorily gave Jim a grippish hand, his face betrayed curiosity mingled with disapproval.

"Business, eh? It's about time there was some business between yeh and me beside freighting yeh supplies to be et up by yer people while the furs go to LeBlond. Well, what's the business that brings yeh in the freeze-up? Man yeh're crazy!"

Jim met the usual Christie wail with a complaisant smile. "I've come for two dog-teams."

"Dog-teams!" Andrew Christie raised bony hands in protest. "Two dog-teams! So yeh've wasted all this time comin' to Expanse, thinkin' I'll let yeh have two teams, did yeh?"

"No, I've wasted no time, for I'm going back with the teams," Jim grinned into the purpled face of his irritable superior. "You gave me a year in which to double my trade, didn't you?"

"Yes! And I don't mind tellin' yeh that your successor's bin picked."

Jim's wind-burned face stiffened. For an instant the deep-set gray eyes grew dark with the anger he fought to control. "This," he thought, "this is my reward for losing her." Then, buttressed with the knowledge of his sure victory, he said mildly, "Thanks for your expression of confidence."

Evidently ashamed of the frank speaking into which his anger had led him, Christie compromised with: "What in thunder d'yeh want of these dogs?"

Briefly Jim told of his promise to the Indians to visit the Pipestone lakes in early December.

"So yeh bin up there this fall, eh?"

"Yes. It's a long story. I'll tell you later. Do I get the dogs, Mr. Christie?"

"Well, if yeh can't get 'em down for the Christmas trade, I suppose yeh'll have to go after 'em."

"So, it's agreed I get two dog teams?"

"Yes."

"Thanks. I think I'll drop over and see Mary."

"Ahem!"

The inspector scratched his bearded chin as he coughed. He seemed embarrassed, to the man who waited for him to speak.

"I—I wouldn't bother Mary—now. A-hem!" Again he cleared his throat.

"Y'see, she's always thought pretty well of you—but we've had some news. She—yeh'd better wait and go over to supper with me."

"What could she have heard?" Jim wondered, as he followed Christie into the house. "Poor Mary, if she only knew the truth!"

But the desolation in his heart numbed him to indifference to the attitude of the daughter of Andrew Christie. It mattered little to Jim Stuart what rumor the moccasin telegraph had brought from Mitawangama.

Grave faced, she met him at the door and gave him an unresponsive hand, patently avoiding his eyes, and, when she had served the men their supper, returned to the kitchen. Doubtless a highly colored version of the rescue of Aurore and his trip with Omar and Pierre to LeBlond's had reached Expanse. In his misery, however, he ignored her coolness.

After supper, in the trade-house, when he told of the ambush on the Woman river and of the banishment of Paradis, the red face of Christie beamed with satisfaction.

"Now we've got something to hold over Meester LeBlond!" chuckled the inspector, rubbing his bony hands.

"Yes, but I don't think he knew anything about this ambush."

"Maybe not; but I've me own idea about that. Now yeh learned up on the Pipestones what's been keeping the trade from yeh?"

Behind a cloud of tobacco smoke the small eyes of Omar twinkled as he waited eagerly for Jim's reply.

"Why, the friendly Indians told us that Sunset House was supposed to be pestered with evil spirits—devils!"

"Well, I'll be skinned!" The thin lipped mouth of Christie stretched in a loud laugh. "Deevils! That's pretty good!" One pale blue eye closed under a bushy brow. "Since yeh fished that good lookin' girl of LeBlond outa the lake and sneaked over under her father's nose to spend the day with her, I figured there was a devil among the weemen up there. But evil spirits!"

Jim's cold eyes met the other's smirk. So Aurore's Indian girl had talked? This was what Mary had heard.

"Paradis spread the tale through a medicine man that the place was haunted," Stuart explained, ignoring the insinuating grin of his chief. "But Esau convinced them that it was simply a trick to get the trade."

This was Jim's sole report of the Odyssey of the three friends to the Sturgeon valley and many a new moon was to swing above the white desert of Lake Expanse before Andrew Christie heard the story. Until the pelts of the Pipestone and the Sturgeon country packed the fur-loft of Sunset House, the lips of three men were closed.

When the ice grew strong enough for sledding on the great lake, and the snow deepened in the forest, Jim and Omar would start back with the dogs; until then, they were held prisoners at the post. One windless day, a lead-hued sky blanketed the sun and the air slowly went white. The "long snows" had come.

By the early dusk six inches had fallen. Outside the trade-house two toboggan sleds, their loads covered with tarpaulin wrappers and lashed, waited for the early start, before dawn, under the stars.

At Christie's house Jim, the clerk, McComb, and the inspector sat at their supper. Following her custom, Mary had served the men and retired to the kitchen.

"Yeh have plenty of fish on yer cache, Stuart?" demanded Christie. "Two extra teams'll make a hole in yer supply and I don't want my dogs underfed."

He failed to delight him. Reflected in the mirror, she would see herself with ghastly green skin and dark purple lips—rather as if she'd been dead for two weeks.

Steinmetz said this proved everything was relative.

It Still Works

Yearning for useful knowledge, a youth writes the Efficiency Magazine that he sometimes hears reference to the "Rule of Three." "Please," he requests, "what is it?" "Forget yesterday; work today, and plan for tomorrow," replies the sagacious editor.

"We made a big haul of whitefish and lake trout this fall; there's plenty. I'll have your dogs back here in good shape before Christmas—"

"What's all that noise about over at the trade-house?" broke in McComb.

The three men stopped eating to listen. "I hear dog bells," said Jim, rising. "Don't suppose they've sent a packet through from the railroad?"

"That's just what it is," agreed Christie, rising with a mouth full of food.

Leaving the house, the three men walked through the falling snow toward the yellow glow of the trade-house windows. In front of the building the post dogs circled and snarled around a panting team, whose driver held off Christie's huskies with a heavy whip while he talked to two company Indians.

Grave Faced, She Met Him at the Door and Gave Him an Unresponsive Hand.

"Mail packet!" Jim surmised. "She'll get my letter, then, next week."

While the driver led his tired dogs off to be fed, the mail pouch was brought into the trade-room and eagerly opened.

Hoping against the inevitable, Jim waited as the inspector, squinting leisurely at the addresses, went through the pile of letters and papers dumped on the trade-counter. Pitying him, possibly regretting the raw brutality of the note she had sent to Sunset House, Aurore might have written—might even have softened toward the man she had so suddenly thrust from her life. He waited, hands desperately clenched, his heart stifling him with its beating. Then he stiffened as Christie picked up the last letter.

"Dum! Miss Joan McCoy, Jackfish—"

Jim turned away to hide his disappointed face from the light of the lamp. She had done with him. He was a fool to think that Aurore LeBlond carried pity in that wild heart of hers—pity for a former plaything of a fur trader buried far in the forest. Opening the sheet-iron stove, he dropped the letter he had written into the flames.

They returned to the inspector's quarters where Christie and McComb greedily read papers weeks old, while Stuart smoked apart with his thoughts.

He had finished his pipe and was about to turn in for the sleep he would need before the early start, when he suddenly looked up to surprise Mary Christie watching him from the doorway leading to the kitchen. The eyes of the girl, which for days had worn the cold indifference of a stranger, were now soft with pity—gentle with the sympathy of a friend.

She beckoned to him, and rising, ill at ease, he followed her to the kitchen, where she closed the door. Then he noticed that she held a Winnipeg paper.

Without a word Mary handed the sheet to the man who vainly strove to fathom her swift change of mood. "I'm so sorry, Jim," she said, quietly, "that it has come to you as well as to me."

He glanced at the sheet he held in his hands, and there, laughing up at him, was the face of Aurore LeBlond.

Under it he read: "Miss Aurore LeBlond, daughter of Louis LeBlond, of the North-West Trading company, who is to marry Bruce MacLauren, well-known Winnipeg business man."

Jim let the paper slide to the floor. So it was MacLauren, all the time? MacLauren, the smooth city man, her father's financial backer. While the three from Sunset House went north to search for Jingwak, MacLauren had wasted no time with the girl who doubted the love of a man who could leave her.

Her eyes soft with compassion, Mary Christie watched the stricken face of Stuart.

After a space, he raised his eyes to hers. "Thank you, Mary," he said thickly. "We're getting an early start. I think I'll—turn in."

Insensible to his surroundings, like one in a dream, he stood staring at the floor; then, with a deep breath, said: "Good-night! Good-by, Mary!"

Like a blind man he groped his way from the room.

Reason for Lecturer's Objection to Peanuts

Princeton is rife with anecdotes of former President Francis Landy Patton, who has just passed his ninety-ninth milestone in his island refuge, Bermuda. An alumnus remembers how he once dealt with a class who got on his nerves by shelling peanuts while he was lecturing. He said:

"Young gentlemen, I had hoped before I reached this point in the lecture that the visible supply of peanuts would be exhausted. I realize that these lectures to which you are compelled to listen put a great strain upon you, and I have no desire to interfere with your natural right to seek that refreshment which will enable you to bear up under that strain."

But I am a somewhat nervous man and I must admit that the constant popping of peanuts is somewhat disturbing to me. I wish that in the future you would be willing to substitute some less audible means of refreshment, say sponge cake."—New York Christian Advocate.

Oil Well Under Sea

At Ventura, Calif., an adventurous oil seeker is drilling an oil well in the ocean floor under 35 feet of water. To carry out the task, C. L. Roberts, of Los Angeles, invented and built an island of steel on which to erect the well derrick. This island is 60 by 90 feet and is anchored to the bedrock far below the ocean floor. If he strikes oil it will be the first of its kind in the world and will likely start many similar operations.

THEY HAVE FOUND A 3-MINUTE WAY TO RELIEVE SORE THROAT

All Pain And Soreness Eased In Few Minutes This Simple Way

Proves Only Medicine Helps A Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes.

Results are among the most extraordinary in medical science. On doctors' advice, millions are following this way... discarding old-time "washes" and "antiseptics." For it has been found that only medicine can help a sore throat.

Simple To Do. All you do is crush and dissolve three BAYER Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water. Gargle with it twice—as pictured above. If you have any indication of a cold—before gargling take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water. This is to combat any signs of cold that have gone into your system. Keep on taking if cold has a "hold." For Genuine Bayer Aspirin will not harm you. Your doctor will tell you, it does not depress the heart. Get a box of 12 or a bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Reduces Infection, Eases Pain Instantly. Gargling with Bayer Aspirin will do three things: Relieve soreness at once. Allay inflammation. AND—reduce infection; which is the important thing in fighting a sore throat.

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways. Results are quick and amazing.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles. Watch this when you buy.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

A Helpful Hint For Skin Health

Give your skin the protection of the best and safest soap. The experience of millions, during the past fifty years, tells you that your best choice is Cuticura Soap. Use it regularly every day; it not only cleanses but keeps the skin in good condition, freeing it from all cause of irritation.

Pioneer's Spook To Be Heard on Radio

Were the ghost of Buffalo Bill to meet and speak to some modern mortal, says the explorer, Carver Wells, it is likely that the conversation would be very similar to that heard next Wednesday night, Feb. 15, in the Continental Oil Company radio program over 23 NBC stations.

While taking his hearers on an imaginary ramble through Colorado, the "Treasure State," Wells meets the spectre of the famous pony express rider and showman near his burial place on Lookout Mountain. They talk of old days and new days; compare the stagecoach to the automobile, and examine the Cody rifle, "Lucretia Borgia," which brought down 4,000 buffalo. Even facts about prehistoric Colorado are included in the broadcast.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WMAQ Wednesday night at 9:30—10 p. m.

GREEN GARDEN

A full house attended the entertainment given in the school house in District No. 153 Green Garden Monday night. A fine program was given. John Harnack played several accordin numbers. The Three Aces from Mokena gave several Hawaiian guitar and song selections.

The pupils all showed marked ability and reflected the splendid training they are receiving from Miss Jacobi, their teacher. Refreshments were served at the close of the entertainment.

Observance of Lincoln's Birthday—February 12th—has become a time honored custom in every community. Banks close their doors—so do the schools—and patriotic demonstrations of one kind or another are planned in commemoration of him whom many call "the greatest president the United States ever had."

If we only observed more of his principles and if we only had another LINCOLN today to lead us, what a difference there would be in conditions today! We MUST have another LINCOLN to lead us out of the bondage we are in with grafting public officials, crime and indifference as to the future of our nation.

Mr. W. J. Lafferty, Division Passenger Agent of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad company and Don C. Hall of Mokena were in conference Thursday discussing plans for future activities in possible solution of unemployment relief problems. "Co-operative production" was the theme and embodied the consideration of "Forward to the Soil", colonization, the opening of factories and other industries and a gigantic amusement enterprise. Mr. Hall believes that the plan is the first consideration. Further particulars will be published later. Mokena may be the opening point of one or more of the projects.
